Interurban Line To Dam is Projected.

An interurban line from San Antonio to the Medina dam is in prospect of construction. It will go via San Jose, Kirk, Lacoste and Castrovilla, a distance of thirty-eight miles. The road will be built by the San Antonio, San Jose & Medina Valley Interurban Railway Company.

The company now has a line in operation from the end of the Harlandale line to San Jose and according to General Manager J. G. Miller, contracts have been signed for construction of the next section, a thirteen-mile stretch from San Jose to Kirk. Construction will be in charge of H. L. Miles, a railroad contractor of large operations, who is interested in the proposition and is coming from Kansas to direct activities. He is expected to arrive next week and Mr. Miller said construction would be commenced shortly thereafter.

Mr. Miller estimates that twenty-four months will be required to complete the line to the dam. It will be built in three sections, the first from San Jose to Kirk, the second from Kirk to Castrovilla and then from Castrovilla to the dam. Representatives of the company are now engaged in securing right-of-way and making other necessary arrangements so that the work may progress without a hitch.

It is planned to use gasoline-driven motor cars as a means of transportation. The use of electric power for the road was deemed too expensive. According to Mr. Miller six McKeen motor cars, 55 feet in length, will be ordered to begin operation. The first work to be done will be alteration of the present line to San Jose from the Corpus Christi road to the Pleasanton road in order to save about three-quarters of a mile in distance.

The road will give Castrovilla its first rail connections with the outside world. It will pass near the vast acreage to be irrigated from the Medina dam in this vicinity of Kirk and Lacoste, will serve San Jose, a health resort, and where the largest bathing beach in Texas is under construction at the present time, and will afford a means of reaching the Medina dam.

With these many advantages the traffic undoubtedly will be heavy from the outset and Mr. Miller said no difficulty is anticipated in completing financial arrangements for construction of the entire stretch.—The San Antonio Light.

Hudson-Lytle.

Henry Barnard Hudson and Miss Lucy Margaret Lytle were united in marriage yesterday morning at 7:30 o'clock at St. Mary's Church by Rev. Father Quinn. An effective massing of Shasta daisies was made against a background of palms before the altar. As a bridal song Miss Nellie Lytle sang "Ave Maria," and as a signal for the entrance of the bridal party, J. M. Steinfeldt played the Lohengrin wedding march. The bride, who entered with her brother, Nelson, was attended by Miss Elizabeth Lytle, bridesmaid, and Mrs. J. M. Davis, as matron of honor. Both wore white lingerie frocks, and picture hats of white chiffon. Their arm bouquets were marguerites and ferns. The little flower girl, Elizabeth King, wore a lingerie frock and a wreath of marguerites. The bride wore a gown of tango corded silk and a hat to match, and carried an arm bouquet of marguerites.

The groom's only attendant was E. M. Nolan, who acted as best man.

Following the ceremony, the bridal party and a few friends were guests at a wedding breakfast, served at the bride's home on South Presa Street. The living rooms were adorned with marguerites, the mantles and windows being barked with the flowers. The breakfast was served buffet style. The coffee urn was presided over by Miss Evelyn Yturri and the punch bowl by Miss Mary Norton, while the bride's cake was in charge of Miss Marguerite Waller.

Mr. and Mrs. Hudson left yesterday for a motor trip through the Boerne and Comfort mountains. After July 1 they will be at home in Hondo.—Friday's Express.

The Old Flag.

BY WALTER G. DOTY.

Let it quietly wave o'er the breasts of the brave
Where they sleep in the mountain or dell,
Or, high on the staff, let it dimple and laugh
In the breezes that love it so well.
Oh, banner of light, with your crimson and white,
With your field of the heavens' own blue
And your glorious stars brighter made by the scars
That our heroes have suffered for you:

Float ever, droop never, forever, old flag!
Though the armed world assail
you, what coward would lag
To rise in defense of our beautiful flag?
By a thousand campfires have the vows of our sires
Ever been that the flag should still reign;
And they battled and bled till the rivers ran red,
But the flag floated free from all stain.
Let us keep it unfurled to enlighten
the world—
Right's emblem as ages go by,
Ever glad to the sight is that banner
so bright
As it ripples in glory on high.

THE Democratic State Convention will be held this year in August at El Paso. This is the first time in the history of the border city the state Democratic Convention has been held there.

THERE is a natural born humorist editing the Marathon Hustler
and we predict that soon or late
some great purveyor of humor,
like Puck, Life or the West Texas Magazine, will find him.
And when they do they will connect with a live wire!

JOE Boehmer says in the West
Texas Magazine the reason why Kuz'n Bill has not published a poem in recent issues of the magazine is because the blue pencil
is at that end of the combination.
The soft pencil must be mighty hard on Kuz'n Bill's tender poetic feelings!

THE entire object of true education is to make people not merely "do" the right things,
but "enjoy" the right things;
not merely industrious, but to love industry—not merely learned, but to love knowledge—not merely just, but to hunger and thirst after justice.—Ruskin.

TOMORROW is the anniversary of the adoption of the American Flag. The present flag of the United States was adopted by the Continental Congress June 14, 1777, one hundred and thirty-seven years ago. At first it had thirteen stars and thirteen stripes, one each for the thirteen original colonies. The flag now contains thirteen stripes as originally but it has a star for each state in the union. Hurrah for Old Glory; "long may she wave over the land of the free and the home of the brave."

BUT responsibility is the great character developer and very few of us really know what we can do until we are put to the test. The market is long on men who can take orders, but short on those who can intelligently issue them. Responsibility requires a certain amount of initiative; the willingness to act when occasion demands and the courage to fail under honest effort and take the consequences.
Of course you may fail; but you can't tell whether you will succeed unless you try; and having tried to the utmost of your ability and failed, is better than never to have tried at all. Better because in every loss there is the compensation of experience, while mere inaction means mental and physical stagnation,
the dam and sire of annihilation.
—Maurice Switzer in Leslie's.

HOW TO GET STRENGTH

after any sickness is purely a matter of nourishment, whether the attack was an ordinary cold or severe illness; the weakened forces cannot repulse disease germs, and this is why a relapse is so often fatal or why chronic weakness often follows sickness.

Restoring strength to millions of people
for forty years has proven the real need for taking Scott's Emulsion after any sickness; nothing equals it—nothing compares with it. Its pure, medicinal nourishment, free from alcohol or opiates, promptly creates rich blood, strengthens
the nerves and lungs to avert tuberculosis.

THAT Ball's chances of being nominated for the Governorship
at the July primaries are growing so doubtful as to alarm his friends is further evidenced by the fact that they have appealed to Joe Bailey to come to the breach. And right manfully does he again essay to "quiet all Texas parties" with his usual specious sophistries. In a lengthy but vain effort to cover up the real animus of his hate for Ferguson
—his vendetta vow that no man who opposed him should ever be elected Governor of Texas—he goes into a lengthy argument against Ferguson's proposition to limit land rentals. But every argument he advances has been advanced before by the specious pleaders of special privilege and have been destroyed by the exigencies of necessity for the protection of society against the rapaciousness of private greed. The fact which Bailey assumes that this measure would be pleaded as a precedent for the fixing by law of the price of products is far-fetched and comes at a strangely inopportune time, just after the state has broken up a combination of one class of producers (the printers) to fix their own artificial price for their product and assumed the control of the price of that product by re-legating it back to the natural law of supply and demand. But even were Bailey's pretended fears for the rights of the individual which he pretends to see in Fer-guson's proposition to limit land rentals well founded, one can but marvel that one so astute as to see a mere possibility should become so alarmed over it as to wholly forget the direct assault
not alone upon individual rights
but the right of local self-government involved in Ball's proposition to substitute state-wide prohibition for our present system of local option. When analyzed, the pleadings of the sophist always turn against and confound him. In putting his oar into Texas politics again Bailey has but furnished Ferguson and his friends with another club with which to beat him whom he would have helped. And they will beat him full sore!

EVERYBODY respects the man who talks without circumlocu-tion and who means what he says, whose tongue is not twisted and who goes right to the mark, never seeking to mislead or to misrepresent. Straight talk is a virtue that is practiced all too little. Imagine what a different world this would be if there was no other kind in business, in domestic affairs, in society, in diplomacy—between employers and workers, politicians and people, government and governed, and in the professional and the business world! How large a part of many men's occupations would be gone, if there was never anything but perfectly straight talk between man and man.—Christian Herald.

AT a meeting of the state Executive Committee of the Democratic Party held at Waco Monday it was decided to again
submit the question of submission to the Democratic voters at the July primary. If the vote is favorable in the primary the state will be again put to the expense of another prohibition election next year and for twelve months the state will be torn by the turmoil and strife of another prohibition campaign. Men and brethren, why must we suffer
this? Let all good citizens prepare now to go to the polls at the July primary and vote against this strife and turmoil
by voting against submission.

years ago, with the kidneys can naturally be expected to perform the same work in similar cases. Read this:

that my kidneys became disordered.
I believe the trouble was brought on by horseback riding, in connection with bad drinking water. I tried different remedies, but did not get

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local medicines, and by constantly failing to cure
with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J.
Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system.
They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Direct interchange of mail between this port and the capital of the republic was renewed yesterday over the main line of the Mexican railway. The American authorities here sent out two shipments of mail consisting of twenty-five sacks each and the Mexicans sent in from the interior ten sacks in all.

There are about 200 or 300 sacks of foreign mail here destined for interior points throughout the republic, but this is being sent through to Cordoba the Mexican distributing point in installments of only twenty-five sacks each by request of the Mexican government as it is not desired to overwork the postal employees engaged in sorting it.

As the Mexicans had requested that registered mail be given the preference over non-registered mail, the first twenty-five sacks sent out were of registered mail, the majority of which was destined for the foreign legations and consulates in the capital and the officials of the Mexican foreign office. There also was much registered mail for private persons.

The Mexican postal authorities in Cordoba and the capital are sending here only such mail as is directed to persons in the port of Vera Cruz. Mail from the interior of Mexico destined for American cities and towns goes out of the country via Coatzacoalcas, and this accounts for the small number of sacks reaching here from the interior yesterday. August Kemof is the American mail clerk who will go up daily in charge of the mail from here and to receive incoming mail.

The Mexican postal authorities have secured and put into use a heavy freight automobile for transferring the mail across the gap where the railway line is torn up between this port and Tejeria, thus facilitating the quickness with which it is delivered.—The Mexican Herald.

Take Plenty of Time to Eat.

There is a saying that "rapid eating is slow suicide." If you have formed the habit of eating too rapidly you are most likely suffering from indigestion or constipation, which will result eventually in serious illness unless corrected. Digestion begins in the mouth. Food should be thoroughly masticated and insalivated. Then when you have a fullness of the stomach or feel dull and stupid after eating, take one of Chamberlain's Tablets. Many severe cases of stomach trouble and constipation have been cured by the use of these tablets. They are easy to take and most agreeable in effect. Sold by All Dealers.

An Interesting Letter.

In sending us an invitation to attend the graduating exercises of the 113th commencement of the University of Georgia, from June 13 to 17, 1914, Dr. H. H. Rothe, who graduates with the degree of Bachelor of Science in Agriculture, writes us the following letter which we are sure will be perused with interest by our numerous readers.—Editor.

June 1, 1914.

Mr. Fletcher Davis,
Hondo, Texas.
My Dear Mr. Davis:

I take great pleasure in sending you an invitation to the Georgia University Commencement in which I participate so far as to have conferred upon me the degree of B. S. in Agriculture. I worked for this degree since coming here along with my regular duties and feel greatly pleased over completing the four-year course in two and one-half years. The degree in agriculture goes hand in hand with the one I already have in veterinary science, the two sciences being closely allied to each other, and I feel well fitted now to carry on work along any lines of agriculture. My chief desire, however, is to become a farmer in my own section and by such demonstration as is possible help my own people to adopt the better farm methods. Agriculture certainly affords a wonderful field. I wish you would sound the warning to the fathers of the boys in Medina County and the boys themselves of the wonderful opportunities awaiting them if they would but go after them; and after receiving agricultural training the most profitable thing by far that any boy can do is to go back home again to the farm and return to his father many, many times over the cost of his education by simply putting into practice the more economical, scientific methods of farming and make two blades of grass grow where only one grew before. Theoretically, that means double the income, and there never was a more true statement than this nor one that has been more thoroughly put to the test and proven beyond doubt to be so. For example, a third year student here at the College tells me that by handing to his father such information as he was able to obtain here in three years has almost reduced their farm operating expense by half and more than doubled their crop production. This may seem exaggerated but undoubtedly the father was greatly benefited by his son's knowledge. I could cite many other such cases. Take an example like this, different in a sense but the same fundamental principle, that of enlightenment, is involved: A thirteen-year old Georgia girl became a member of the County Canning Club. The club organizer taught her to plant, cultivate and can with her own hands a tenth-acre. She was taught how to keep account of the cost of producing the crop and later to market her product. Her record shows that she made from the tenth-acre $121.00 by selling her canned goods at market price. At this rate one acre would return $1210.00, enough money to pay her expenses at the State Normal School or send her brother through the College of Agriculture; all because an agricultural expert came to her and showed her how to do a simple little operation which she had never dreamt was possible before.

This county organization work, which includes also boys corn clubs and boys pig clubs, is very important, and I hope will be taken up in our county in the near future. This leads up to the fact that a college education is within the reach of any farmer's boy or girl. The prevalent idea that only the rich men's sons can go to college is all wrong. One determined by the well-directed efforts as the little canning club girl's can in a short time pay his own way through college, or in the case of a boy, with a little bit of encouragement from his father, can after school hours, as all other corn and pig club boys do, spend his energies towards raising corn and also pigs, through which he markets his corn in the most profitable way. This should return to him a handsome little sum, which if laid away for four years, will easily pay the expense of four years of college education. Then, there is a student labor system in all of our American universities which affords opportunities for earning a considerable part and in some cases the entire cost of education directly at the College by doing such work as is controlled by the college, during leisure time. This year's records shows that over 400 boys out of the 4500 students at the Ohio State University are paying either in part or entirely the cost of their college education by doing work attendant to college activities. Also, at this institution a great many boys work on the farm, attending to field operations, caring for live stock, milking dairy cows, etc., all of which in itself affords a splendid opportunity for observing the best methods of feeding, housing and caring for farm animals; therefore, let every boy know that if there is a will there is a way.

It would give me pleasure to assist any Medina County boy into the A. & M. College of Texas or if he cares to come so far east, into the agricultural college here. There is an increasing demand for well trained men in the different branches of agriculture and veterinary science, whereas the country is amply supplied with doctors, lawyers and engineers. Aside from the opportunities on the farm we find the Government, states and municipalities employing annually increasing numbers of agricultural experts and veterinarians to carry on scientific research, extension work, station experimental work, food inspection, Texas fever tick eradication, hog cholera eradication and control and eradication of other diseases of both plants and animals. The recent passage of the Smith Lever bill appropriating money with which to carry on extension work in co-operation with state colleges of agriculture, also the $500,000 appropriation by Congress to eradicate hog cholera, to be expended in co-operation with state officials, show an increased activity along these lines. What does all this mean? Let us take the hungry mouths of the Nation as a pressure gauge, and we find them rapidly increasing in number. On the other hand, we find our crude methods of producing the food with which to feed them are becoming inadequate. Therefore, we must revolutionize our methods; make two blades of grass grow where one grew before. Of still more importance is the protection of that food supply from destruction after we have produced it, so we need trained men both to increase the supply and protect it. I hope the time is not far distant when the elements of agriculture will be taught in the high schools of Hondo and other high schools, as is already being done in some northern states; also the county organization work of corn clubs, pig clubs and canning clubs.

In conclusion, I would like to say that I invite any Medina County boy to correspond with me on the subject of a college education and I would be glad to give such information as I am able. With best wishes, I am,

Very truly yours,

H. H. ROTHE,

Adjunct Professor of Veterinary Science.

COULD SCARCELY WALK ABOUT

And For Three Summers Mrs. Vincent Was Unable to Attend to Any of Her Housework.

Pleasant Hill, N. C.—"I suffered for three summers," writes Mrs. Walter Vincent, of this town, "and the third and last time, was my worst.

I had dreadful nervous headaches and prostration, and was scarcely able to walk about. Could not do any of my housework.

I also had dreadful pains in my back and sides and when one of those weak, sinking spells would come on me, I would have to give up and lie down, until it wore off.

I was certainly in a dreadful state of health, when I finally decided to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I firmly believe I would have died if I hadn't taken it.

After I began taking Cardui, I was greatly helped, and all three bottles relieved me entirely.

I fattened up, and grew so much stronger in three months, I felt like another person altogether."

Cardui is purely vegetable and gentle-acting. Its ingredients have a mild, tonic effect, on the womanly constitution.

Cardui makes for increased strength, improves the appetite, tones up the nervous system, and helps to make pale, sallow cheeks, fresh and rosy.

Cardui has helped more than a million weak women, during the past 50 years. It will surely do for you, what it has done for them. Try Cardui today.

Im Strong
for NYAL'S

YOU CAN BE STRONG, TOO!

As the season advances, you'll be outdoors more and more. First thing you know, your muscles will be sore and lame. Then you'll need a good liniment. Here's where NYAL'S LINIMENT comes to the rescue.

NYAL'S LINIMENT is absorbed by every pore and is taken up into the system. In this way all the soreness and stiffness is quickly removed with lasting results. Painful swellings and bruises are given the greatest relief on short notice.

After an hour's work in the garden, "playing catch," or a hundred and one forms of exercise, you're liable to be lame and stiff if you don't apply NYAL'S LINIMENT. And you, my dear lady, after a day's work house-cleaning or other work around the house, are liable to be sore in the muscles and joints if you don't rub in NYAL'S LINIMENT.

NYAL'S LINIMENT costs only 25 and 50 cents the bottle! Certainly cheap in price for the results it brings.

The Valiants of Virginia

By
Hallie Erminie Rives
(Mrs. Post Wheeler)

Illustrated by Lauren Stoeck

Copyright, 1912, by Robb Merrill Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—John Vallant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed.

CHAPTER II—He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation.

CHAPTER III—His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia.

CHAPTER IV—He learns that this estate came into the family by royal grant and has been in the possession of the Valiants ever since.

CHAPTER V—On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an ambitious beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely.

CHAPTER VI—An old negro tells Shirley's fortune and predicts great trouble for her on account of a man.

CHAPTER VII—Uncle Jefferson, an old negro, takes Vallant to Damory court.

CHAPTER VIII—Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Vallant's father, and a man named Sassoon, were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Vallant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed.

CHAPTER IX—Vallant finds Damory court, with its woods and meadows and the buildings in a very much neglected condition. Uncle Jefferson and his wife, Aunt Daphne, are engaged as servants.

CHAPTER X—Vallant explores his ancestral home. He is surprised by a fox hunting party which invades his estate. He recognizes Shirley at the head of the party.

CHAPTER XI—He gives sanctuary to the cornered fox. Gossips discuss the advent of the new owner and recall the tragedy in which the elder Vallant took part.

CHAPTER XII—Vallant decides to rehabilitate Damory court and make the land produce a living for him.

CHAPTER XIII—He meets Shirley, who has been gathering foxes on the Valiant estate, and reveals his identity to her.

CHAPTER XIV—Vallant saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which bites him. Knowing the deadliness of the bite, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life.

CHAPTER XV—Shirley tells her mother of the incident and the latter is strangely moved at hearing that a Vallant is again living at Damory court.

CHAPTER XVI—Vallant learns some of the history of his family from Doctor Southall and Major Bristow.

CHAPTER XVII—He learns for the first time that his father left Virginia on account of a duel in which Doctor Southall and Major Bristow acted as his father's seconds.

CHAPTER XVIII—Vallant and Shirley become good friends. Mrs. Dandridge faints when she first meets Vallant.

CHAPTER XIX—Vallant works wonders in the old place. He discovers that he has a fortune in old walnut trees.

CHAPTER XX—With the advice and assistance of the major and Shirley, Vallant restores the gardens to what they were in his father's time.

CHAPTER XXI—The yearly tournament, a survival of the jousting of feudal times, is to be held at Damory court.

CHAPTER XXII—At the last moment Vallant takes the place of one of the knights, who is sick, and enters the lists.

CHAPTER XXIII—He wins and chooses Shirley Dandridge as queen of beauty to the dismay of Katherine Fargo, a former sweetheart, who is visiting in Virginia.

CHAPTER XXIV—The tournament ball at Damory court draws the elite of the countryside. Shirley is crowned by Vallant as queen of beauty.

CHAPTER XXV—Vallant tells Shirley of his love and they become engaged.

CHAPTER XXVI—Katherine Fargo is deeply humiliated at reading in the faces of Vallant and Shirley the evidence of plighted troth.

CHAPTER XXVII—Katherine Fargo, determined not to give up Vallant without a struggle, points out to Shirley how terrible it would be for the woman who caused the duel to meet Vallant, who looks so much like his father.

CHAPTER XXVIII—Shirley, uncertain, but feeling that her mother was in love with the victim of Vallant's pistol, breaks the engagement.

CHAPTER XXIX—Greef King, a liberated convict whom Major Bristow had sent to prison, makes threats against his prosecutor.

CHAPTER XXX—Vallant pleads with Shirley, but fails to persuade her to change her decision.

"All right, you needn't," retorted Rickey freezing. "Sit up, Greenie. People don't lie on their backs in Sunday school."

Greenie yawned listlessly, and righted herself with injured slowness. "Ah diffuses ter 'cep' yo' insult, Rickey. Snaydah," she said. "Ah'd ruther lose mah 'ligion dan mah laz'ness. En Ah 'spises yo' spissable dissistion!"

"Let us all rise," continued Rickey, unmoved, "and sing 'Kingdom Coming.'" And she struck up lustily, beating time on the stump with a stick, and the rows of children joined in with unison, the colored contingent coming out strong on the chorus:

De yerf shall be full ob de wund'ful story
As watahs dat covah do sea!

The clear voices in the quiet air startled the fluttering birds and sent a squirrel to the tip-top of an oak, from which he looked down, flitting his bush. They roused a man, too, who had lain in a sodden sleep under a bush at a little distance. He was ragged and soiled and his heavy brutal face, covered with a dark stubble of some days' growth, had an ugly pear slanting back from cheek to hair.

Without getting up, he rolled over to command a better view, and set his eyes, blinking from their slumber, on the children.

"We will now take up the collection," said Rickey. ("You can do it, June. Use a flat piece of bark.") Remember that what we give today is for the poor heathen in—Alabama."

The bark-slab made its rounds, receiving leaves, acorns, and an occasional pin. Midway, however, there arose a shrill shriek from the bearer and the collection was scattered broadcast. "Rosebud Meredith," said Rickey witheringly, "it would serve you right for putting that toad in the plate if your hand would get all over warts! I'm sure I hope it will." She rescued the fallen piece of bark and announced: "The collection this afternoon has amounted to a hundred dollars and seven cents. And now, children, we will skip the catechism and I will tell you a story."

Her auditors hunched themselves nearer, a double row of attentive white and black faces, as Rickey with a preliminary bass cough, began in a drawing tone whose mimicry called forth giggles of ecstasy.

"There were once two little sisters who went to Sunday-school and loved their teacher ve-ery much. They were always good and attentive—Not like that little nigger over there! The one with his thumb in his mouth! One was little Mary and the other was little Susy. They had a mighty rich uncle who lived in Richmond, and once he came to see them and gave them each a dollar. And they were ve-ery glad. It wasn't a mean old paper dollar, all dirt and creases; nor a battered whitey silver dollar; but it was a bright round gold dollar, right out of the mint. Little Mary and little Susy could hardly sleep that night for thinking of what they could buy with those gold dollars.

"Early next morning they went downtown, hand in hand, to the store, and little Susy bought a bag of goober-peas, and sticks and sticks of striped candy, and a limber jack, and a gold ring, and a wax doll with a silk dress on that could open and shut its eyes—"

"Huh!" said the captious Cozy. "You can't buy a wax doll for a dollar. My littlest, littlest one cost three, and she didn't have a stitch to her back!"

"Shut up!" said Rickey briefly. "Dolls were cheaper then." She looked at the row of little negroes, goggle-eyed at the vision of such largess. "What do you think little Mary did with her gold dollar? She loved dolls and candy, too, but she had heard about the poo-oor heathen. There was a tear in her eye, but she took the dollar home, and next day when she went to Sunday-school, she dropped it in the missionary-box.

"Little children, what do you reckon became of that dollar? It bought a big satchelful of tracts for a missionary. He had been a poor man with six children and a wife with a bone-felon on her right hand—not a child old enough to wash dishes and all of them young enough to fall in the fire—so he had to go and be a missionary. He was going to Alabam—to a cannibal island, and he took the tracts and sailed away in a ship that landed him on the shore. And when the heathen cannibals saw him they were ve-ery glad, for there hadn't been any shipwrecked sailors for a long time, and they were ve-ery hungry. So they tied up the missionary and gathered a lot of wood to make a fire and cook him.

"But it had rained and rained and rained for so long that the wood was all wet, and it wouldn't burn, and they all cried because they were so hungry. And then they happened to find the satchelful of tracts, and the tracts were ve-ery dry. They took them and stuck them under the wet wood, and the tracts burned and the wood caught fire and they cooked the missionary and ate him.

"Now, little children, which do you think did the most good with her dollar—little Susy or little Mary?"

The front row, giggled, and a sigh came from the colored ranks. "Dem ar' car'balls," gasped a dusky infant breathlessly. "—dey done eat up all dat candy and dem goober-peas, too?"

The inquiry was drowned in a shriek from several children in unison. They scrambled to their feet, casting fearful glances over their shoulders. The man who had been lying behind the bush had risen and was coming toward them at a slouching amble, one foot dragging slightly. His appearance, in deed, was enough to cause panic. With his savage face, set now in a grin, and his tramp-like costume, he looked fierce and animal-like. White and black, the children fled like startled rabbits, older ones dragging younger, without a backward look—all save Rickey, who stood quite still, her widening eyes fixed on him in a kind of blanched fascinated terror.

He came close to her, never taking his eyes from hers, then put his heavy grimy hand under her chin and turned her twitching face upward, chuckling.

"Ain't afeard, d—n me!" he said with admiration. "Wouldn't skeddaddle with th' fine folks' white-livered young 'uns! Know who I am, don't ye?"

"Greef King," Rickey's lips rather formed than spoke the name.

"Right. An' I know you, too. Got jes' th' same look ez when ye wuzn't no higher'n my knee. So ye ain't at th' Dome no mo', eh? Purkle an' fine linnin an' a dedication. He-ho! Goin' ter make ye another ladyess like the sweet ducky-dovey that rescued ye from th' lovin' embrace o' yer fond step-parent, eh?"

Rickey's small arm went suddenly out and her fingers tore at his shirt-band. "Don't you," she burst in a paroxysm of passion; "don't you even speak her name! If you do, I'll kill you!"

So fierce was her leap that he fell back a step in sheer surprise. Then he laughed loudly. "Why, ye little spittin' white-cat!" he grinned.

He leaned suddenly, gripped her wrist and covering her mouth tightly with his palm, dragged her behind a clump of dogwood bushes. A heavy step was coming along the wood-path. He held her motionless and breathless in this cruel grip till the pedestrian had passed. It was Major Bristow, his spruce white hat on the back of his head, his unadorned waistcoat dappled with the leaf-shadows. He stepped out briskly toward Damory court, swinging his stick, all unconscious of the fierce scrutiny bent on him from behind the dogwoods.

Greef King did not withdraw his hand till the steps had died in the distance. When he did, he clenched his fist and shook it in the air. "There he goes!" he said with bitter hatred. "Yer noble friend that sent me up for six years 't break my heart on th' rock-pile! Oh, he's a top-notch, he is! But he's got Greef King to reckon with yet!" He looked at her balefully and shook her.

"Look-a-ye," he said in a hissing voice. "Ye remember me. I'm a bad one ter fool with. Yer maw foun' that out, I reckon. Now ye'll promise me ye'll tell nobody you've seen me. I'm only a tramp; d'ye hear?" He shook her roughly.

Rickey's fingers and teeth were clenched hard and she said no word. He shook her again viciously, the blood pouring into his scarred face. "Ye snivelin' brat, ye!" he snarled. "I'll show ye!" He began to drag her after him through the bushes. A few yards and they were on the brink of the headlong ugly chasm of Lovers' Leap. She cast one desperate look about her and shut her eyes. Catching her about the waist he leaned over and held her out in mid-air, as if she had been a kitten. "Ye ain't seen me, hev yer? Promise, or over ye go. Ye won't look so pretty when ye're layin' down there on them rocks!"

The child's face was paper-white and she had begun to tremble like a leaf, but her eyes remained closed.

"One—two—" he counted deliberately.

Her eyes opened. She turned one shuddering glance below, then her resolution broke. She clutched his arm and broke into wild supplications. "I promise, I promise!" she cried. "Oh, don't let go! I promise!"

He set her on the solid ground and released her, looking at her with a sneering laugh. "Now we'll see ef ye belong here or up ter Hell's-Half-Acre," he said. "Fine folks keeps their promises, I've heard tell."

Rickey looked at him a moment shaking; then she burst into a passion of sobbing and with her face averted ran from him like a deer through the bushes.

CHAPTER XXX.

In the Rain.

Shirley stood looking out at the rain. It was falling in no steady downpour which held forth promise of ending, but with a gentle constancy that gave the hills a look of sudden discomfort and made disconsolate miry pools by the roadside. The clouds were not too thick, however, to let through a dismal gray brightness that shone on the foliage and touched with glistening lines of high-light the draggled tufts of the soaked blue grass. Now and then, across the dripping fields, fraying skeins of mist wandered, to lie curled in the flooded hollows where, here and there, cattle stood lowing at intervals in a mournful key.

The indoors had become impossible to her. She was sick of trying to read, sick of the endless pinnings and purposeless invention of needless tasks. She wanted movement, the cobwebby mist about her knees, the wet rain in her face. She ran upstairs and came down clad in a close scarlet jersey, with leather gaiters and a soft hat.

Emmaline saw her thus accounted with disapproval. "Lawdy-mercy, child!" she urged; "you ain't goin' out? It's rainin' cats on dawgs!" "I'm neither sugar nor salt, Emmaline," responded Shirley listlessly, dragging on her rain-coat, "and the walk will do me good."

On the sopping lawn she glanced up at her mother's window. Since the night of the ball her own panging self-consciousness had overlaid the fine and sensitive association between them. She had been full of horrible feeling that her face must betray her and the cause of her loss of spirits be guessed.

Her mother, had, in fact, been troubled by this, but was far from guessing the truth. A somewhat long indisposition had followed her first sight of Vallant, and she had not witnessed the tournament. She had hung upon Shirley's description of it, however, with an excited interest that the other was later to translate in the light of her own discovery. If the thought had flitted to her that fate might hold something deeper than friendship in Shirley's acquaintance with Vallant, it had been of the vaguest. His choice of her as Queen of Beauty had seemed a natural homage to that swift and unflinching act of hers which had saved his life. There was in her mind a more obvious explanation of Shirley's altered demeanor. "Perhaps it's Chilly Lusk," she had said to herself. "Have they had a foolish quarrel, I wonder? Ah, well, in her own time she will tell me."

There was some relief to Shirley's overcharged feelings in the very discomfort of the drenched weather; the sucking pull of the wet clay on her boots and the flirt of the drops on her cheeks and hair. She thrust her dogskin gloves into her pocket and held her arms outstretched to let the wind blow through her fingers. The moisture clung in damp wreaths to her hair and rolled in great drops down her coat as she went.

The wildest, most secluded walks had always drawn her most and she instinctively chose one of these today. It was the road whereon squatted Mad Anthony's whitewashed cabin. "Dah's er man gwine look in dem eyes, honey, en gwine make 'em cry en cry." She had forgotten the incident of that day, when he had read her fortune, but now the quivering prophecy came back to her with a shivering sense of reality. "Fo' dah's fish en she ain' afeah'd, en dah's watch en she ain' afeah'd. Et's de thing what eat de ha't outen de breast—dat what she afeah'd of!" If it were only fire and water that threatened her!

She struck her hands together with an inarticulate cry. She remembered the laugh in Vallant's eyes as they had planted the roses, the characteristic gesture with which he tossed the waving hair from his forehead—how she had named the ducks and the peacock and chosen the spots for his flowers; and she smiled for such memories, even in the stabbing knowledge that these dear trivial things could mean nothing to her in the future. She tried to realize that he was gone from her life, that he was the one man on earth whom to marry would be to strike to the heart her love and loyalty to her mother, and she said this over and over to herself in varying phrases:

"You can't! No matter how much you love him, you can't! His father deliberately ruined your mother's life—your own mother! It's bad enough to love him—you can't help that. But you can help marrying him. You would hate yourself. You can never kiss him again, or feel his arms around you. You can't touch his hand. You mustn't even see him. Not if it breaks your heart—as your mother's heart was broken!"

She had turned into an unbeaten way that ambled from the road through a track of tall oaks and pines, scarce more than a bridle-path, winding aimlessly through bracken-strewn depths so dense that even the wild-roses had not found them. In her childish hurts she had always fled to the companionship of the trees. She had known them every one—the black-gum and pale dogwood and gnarled hickory, the prickly-balled "button-wood," the lowly mulberry and the majestic red oak and walnut. They had seemed friendly and pitying counselors, standing about her with arms intertwined. Now, with the rain weeping in soothing gusts through them, they offered her no comfort. She suddenly threw herself face down on the soaked moss.

"Oh, God!" she cried. "I love him so! And I had only that one evening. It doesn't seem just. If I could only have him, and suffer some other way! He's suffering, too, and it isn't our fault! We neither of us harmed anyone! He isn't responsible for what his father did—why, he hardly knew him! Oh, God, why must it be so hard for us? Millions of other people love each other and nothing separates them like this!"

Shirley's warm breath made a little fog against the star-eyed moss. She was scarcely conscious of her wet and clinging clothing, and the soaked strands of her hair. She was so wrapped in her desolation that she no longer heard the sound of the persevering rain and the wet swishing of the bushes—parting now to a hurried step that fell almost without sound on the spongy forest floor. She started up suddenly to see Vallant before her.

He was in a somewhat battered walking suit of brown khaki, with a leather belt and a felt hat whose brim, stiff with the wet, was curved down visor-wise over his brow. In an instant he had drawn her upright, and they stood, looking at each other, drenched and trembling.

"How can you?" he said with a roughness that sounded akin to anger. "Here in this atrocious weather—like this!" he laid a hand on her arm. "You're wet through."

"I—I don't mind the rain," she answered, drawing away, yet feeling with a guilty thrill the masterfulness of his tone, as well as its real concern. "I'm often wet."

His gaze searched her face, feature by feature, noting her pallor, the blue-black shadows beneath her eyes, the caught breath, uneven like a child's from crying. He still held her hands in his.

"Shirley," he said, "I know what you intended to tell me by those flowers—I went to St. Andrew's that night, in the dark, after I read your letter. Who told you? Your—mother?"

"No, no!" she cried. "She would never have told me!"

His face lighted. With an irresistible movement he caught her to him. "Shirley!" he cried. "It shan't be! It shan't, I tell you! You can't break our lives in two like this! It's unthinkable."

"No, no!" she said piteously, pushing him from her. "You don't understand. You are a man, and men—can't."

"I do understand," he insisted. "Oh, my darling, my darling! It isn't right for that spectral thing to come between us! Why, it belonged to a past generation! However sad the outcome of that duel, it held no dishonor. I know only too well the ruin it brought my father! It's enough that it wrecked three lives. It shan't rise again, like Banquo's ghost to haunt ours! I know what you think—I would love you the more, if I could love you more, for that sweet loyalty—but it's wrong, dear, it's wrong!"

"It's the only way."

"Listen. Your mother loves you. If she knew you loved me, she would bear anything rather than have you suffer like this. You say she wouldn't have told you herself. Why, if my father—"

She tore her hands from his and faced him with a cry. "Ah, that is it! You knew your father so little. He was never to you what she is to me. Why, I've been all the life she has had. I remember when she mended my dolls, and held me when I had scarlet fever, and sang me the songs the trees sang to themselves at night. I said my prayers at her knee till I was twelve years old. We were never apart a day till I went away to school."

She paused, breathless.

"Doesn't that prove what I say?" he said, bending toward her. "She loves you far better than herself. She wants your happiness."

"Could that mean hers?" she demanded, her bosom heaving. To see us together—always—always! To be reminded in everything—the lines of your face—the tones of your voice, maybe—of that! Oh, you don't know how women feel—how they remember—how they grieve! I've gone over all you can say till my soul cries out, but it can't change it. It can't!"

Vallant felt as though he were battering with bruised knuckles at a stone wall. A helpless anger simmered in him. "Suppose," he said bitterly, "that your mother one day, perhaps after long years, learns of your sacrifice. She is likely to guess in the end, I think. Will it add to her pleasure, do you fancy, to discover that out of this conception of filial loyalty—for it's that, I suppose!—you have spoiled your own life?"

She shuddered. "She will never learn," she said brokenly. "Oh, I know she would not have spoken. She would suffer anything for my happiness. But I wouldn't have her bear any more for my sake."

His anger faded suddenly, and when he looked at her again, tears were burning in his eyes.

"Shirley!" he said. "It's my heart, too, that you are binding on the wheel! I love you. I want nothing but you! I'd rather beg my bread from door to door with your hand in mine than sit on a throne without you! What can there be in life for me unless you share it? Think of our love! Think of the fate that brought me here to find you in Virginia! Think of our garden—where I thought we would live and work and dream, till we were old and gray—together, darling! Don't throw our love away like this!"

His entreaties left her only whiter, but unmoved. She shook her head, and gazing at him through great clear tears that welled over and rolled down her cheeks.

"I can't fight," she said. "I have no strength left." She put out her hand as she spoke and dropped it with a little limp gesture that had in it tired despair, finality and hopelessness. It caught at his heart more strongly than any words. He felt a warm rush of pity and tenderness.

He took her hand gently without speaking, and pressed it hard against his lips. It seemed to him very small and cold.

They passed together through the wet bracken, his strong arm guiding her over the uneven path, and came to the open in silence.

"Don't come with me," she said then, and without a backward glance, went rapidly from him down the shimmering road.

YOU CAN'T EAT APPETITE POOR

Multitudes of people lose their appetite. Simply don't care for anything to eat. The dinner bell has no interest to them. They loathe their breakfast. They may nibble a little of this and a little of that, but they do not care for it.

Lunch has lost all of its charms, although they try to eat something. Dinner about the same.

There is something positively wrong, of course, but no disease that can be named. Just out of sorts. That is all.

It is in this kind of a condition that Peruna acts very beneficially.

After using Peruna, interest in food is revived. Beginning with a teaspoonful of Peruna before each meal will generally quickly improve the appetite and help the digestion.

Thousands of people can testify to this. Liberated from a slavery that is almost unbearable. The slavery of having no interest in life. All used up. Yet one does not know exactly why. Take Peruna before each meal. Skies will get blue again. Fields will look green once more and life will be pleasant. You will feel that you are good for something and the world is a good place to live in. Peruna will do it. Not as an artificial stimulant. Simply a tonic that stimulates appetite in a natural way.

Those who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

In Memory of Mrs. Bertha Winkler.

Our loved one has gone
To the world above;
Her soul has flown
To the God we love.
Among us she lived
Throughout her days,
God's blessings received
Till her time was here.
Her stay on earth
To us seemed short
Yet from our loved ones
We all must part.
God called her to Him
He who does understand
The perplexities of life
In all this land.
Oh! how we did cherish her,
Our loved one,
And for her do mourn;
Yet, God's will be done.
Since she went home!
The evening shadows linger longer here,
The winter days fill so much of the year
And even summer winds are chill and drear
Since she went home!
The Robin's song has touched a minor strain
The old glad song's breathe but a sad refrain
And laughter sobs with hidden, bitter pain.
Since she went home!
How still the empty rooms her presence blessed!
Untouched the pillows that her dear head pressed,
Our lonely heart hath nowhere for rest.
Since she went home!
The long long days have dragged away like years,
The sunlight has been dimmed with doubts and fears,
And dark nights have rained in lonely tears.
Her loving daughter,
KATIE.

His name was Tommy, and he came home from school looking so down in the mouth that Mother asked him severely what was the matter?
Out of his little trousers pocket he fished a note from the teacher, which said, "Tommy has been a very naughty boy. Please have a serious talk with him."
"What did you do?" asked Mother.
"Nothing," sobbed Tommy. "She asked a question, and I was the only one who could answer it."
"H'm," murmured Mother. "What was the question?"
"Who put the dead mouse in her desk-drawer?" answered Tommy.
